The players, playmaker N'golo Kante and full-backs Ashley Young and Matteo Darmian, have received motion-based feedback for the first time. "HyperMotion Technology" also has a wider range of animations and new collision response. After a thorough simulation of how all the new data was used to develop FIFA 22, Frostbite engineers were able to apply their expertise to improve the way FIFA 22 looks and feels. Visuals Taking on new challenges, the team at EA SPORTS FIFA have created more visually creative animations using data from real players and augmented a 3D world of emotion and movement to give players as authentic an experience as possible. Inspired by real-world football, FIFA 22 introduces players to new high-intensity movements and exceptional animation. Every player-related interaction is now more engaging and immersive, with more natural and believable full-body movements. The team also made the visual quality of player models more varied and more realistic, allowing for more natural reactions to player animations and ball physics. With more detailed facial expressions and new eyes, ears and hair textures, this is now an all-new player character. All-new Explosion system - a dynamic visual effect that adds edge to gameplay. In the past, explosions in FIFA games tended to lack size, duration and material detail, but today, players can blast their opponents in the face or have a more substantial explosion tear through the turf. Players can now instantly explode on contact, including headshots. The visual effects react to more inputs. For example, a player can blow off an opponent's head, with the wound tearing open before the player crumples to the ground. There are also new offsides and corner flags animations that react to contact, such as popping up and out with new material details. On-pitch scene setup and camera motion system - unique high-motion camera movements drive new camera angles for unique views on the field. Now the camera will move and focus more naturally as players are in motion and use the camera more naturally and easily. New camera movement on the run - the camera now moves more naturally and with more responsiveness as players run. Sensitive changes in player speed and acceleration can be seen in the camera movement. Improved AI and referee presentation - the referee now assigns more manual yellow cards. Player and referee animations have been improved
