We immobilized polymyxin B (PMB) on three different types of hollow-fiber membrane (FM) to remove endotoxin from feed solution. The results of the columbia water quality test showed that the addition of the two types of PMB-immobilized FM improved the water quality by removing endotoxin more than the conventional activated carbon (AC). There was little difference in removal efficiency between PMB-immobilized and inactivated FM (PMB-i-FM), while the Km and Vmax values of PMB-i-FM were lower than those of PMB-immobilized FM (PMB-i-FM). PMB-i-FM had a high capacity for endotoxin removal by adsorption and a low capacity by degradation, while PMB-i-FM exhibited nearly identical characteristics to those of PMB-immobilized FM. The PMB-i-FM bioreactor was useful for use in a continuous feed, and the immobilization of PMB on hollow-fiber membranes was a useful strategy for improving endotoxin removal from water treatment.Play My Disney Movie Description When it's time for fun and thrills with an epic story, it's Disney Movie Magic for everyone!
